

Storyboard 1: Before Feedback

Storyboard 2: After Feedback

These storyboards convey the narrative of an artist who is seeking to do something with her art, ideally involving showcasing it to others with collaboration. The AlienWebMD call for submissions is a topic she is interested in, and she has even written a poem about the issue. She decides to submit her work and generate some extra work to add to her submission. A month later, the work is displayed in a collaboratively collaged zine.

When I got feedback from my initial storyboard, it was apparent that I was not clear about how the collaboration would take place, in the form of communications or otherwise. I then added the part about the message board, which is a feature I intend to add to the site. I also added elements to indicate the community would keep in touch throughout the process and afterwards in the form of a Facebook page and a mailing list, which makes it possible for everyone to easily follow up with future projects. I also had to be more clear about the "one month" window — I will add a page on my site to explain the turnover process.